ANGELO DI MARIA: Sculptor

“Sculpture for me is a vehicle with which I hope to enhance life for humanity.”

Angelo Di Maria was born in Delia, Sicily, Italy. His interest in sculpture began when he was six years old and absorbed in creating small figures. In 1958, the Di Maria family came to Reading where Angelo currently pursues his passion.

With 50 years experience sculpting many subjects – from human anatomy to wildlife, from logos to facades, Angelo has developed and perfected unique processes for colors, multi mediums and textures. His ability to capture expressions is a highlight of his work.

In 2008, the Berks Arts Council awarded Angelo with the “Pagoda Award” for excellence in Artistic Development. The Copper Development Association profiled Angelo in its January 2013 issue of Copper in the Arts.

Di Maria’s portraits for donor recognition plaques are installed at Penn State’s Main Campus, Schuylkill County’s Medical Center, the YMCA in Newark, Delaware and other organizations in five states.

Angelo is bringing some of his sculpture and his guitar and will talk about how he gets his inspiration.

thoughts from the other side of the palette

Several changes have occurred during the past year with the BAA. I became interim president in November and with assistance of many members, I am learning the workings of the organization.

A steering committee had been formed that presented several wonderful ideas to the members. Most of these recommendations have been implemented as well as two by-law changes. One of the by-law changes was the semantics of updating our address from the Wyomissing Institute of Fine Arts to the Yocum Institute of Arts Education. The other was to add the position of president-elect to our board, thereby facilitating the progression of presidents.

In order to be able to communicate with members more expeditiously, as well as being a cost savings, we continue our transition toward sending the Palette via email. Hard copies will be available for members not using email. Additionally, our website is being updated and will hopefully attract more attention and new members.

Membership has been growing and the juried shows have returned. In keeping with current trends, entries for the juried show were electronically submitted. Advantages are that the juror can view the art for acceptance at their convenience and the logistical difficulty of handling unaccepted entries is eliminated. Members who are not familiar with this type of entry were able to obtain assistance from several people who were listed in the May Palette. Our 36th Juried Show opened on August 3rd. Of the 134 artists who submitted 253 works of art, our juror selected 107 artists and their work. The August 9th reception had a jam-packed crowd and many thanks go out to our wonderful committee led by Amanda Condict and Fran Parzanese. A sincere thank you to all who helped make this a success.

Another major change is a new treasurer who will give Fred Gurman a well-deserved break! Many thanks to Fred for all he has done over the years. Brian Gallagher has been elected treasurer and James Spencer, a local Certified Public Accountant, will provide a necessary audit.

As the new BAA year begins, we have a full slate of officers and Elaine Reinert has assembled an interesting list of presenters for our meetings. I would like to thank everyone for the support you have shown to me and the other officers as we look forward to a wonderful new year.

The first in a series about photographing your work

anyone CAN! DO it!

Digital submissions are now the standard in the art world—for exhibits, catalogs and curators. There are pros and cons to both traditional and digital methods. Rehashing those arguments isn't my goal in this column.

Instead, my goal is to make it as easy as possible for everyone to take advantage of today's tools and opportunities, which are getting easier to use all the time.

Every artist can and should learn the basic skills for photographing their work, both for entering shows and for making saleable quality prints. You can produce quality photographs of your work and learn to meet the size and naming requirements for digital submissions with a few basic tips and a little practice.

Three elementary requirements:

1. Confidence that you can master this.

2. Basic familiarity with navigating the file structure of your computer.

3. Getting to know your camera.

Even if you choose to partner with someone else to photograph your work and prepare your digital files, I hope you will learn enough from my column so you can work with your partner to do your art justice.

I’ll try to include pointers for people at every skill level. My hope is that beginners won’t be put off by notes I’ll include for more advanced users; even the most advanced among us has room to improve.

Likewise, I hope advanced users won’t brush the column off as too basic. Some of what I have to say may be the encouragement you need to take full advantage of the photographer’s digital toolbox. I’ve heard accomplished photographers blame their cameras for deficiencies in the end product, when in fact, the problem was in their understanding of their camera and software capabilities.

Jamie Wyeth at the Brandywine River Museum

Jamie Wyeth, son of Andrew Wyeth, and grandson of NC Wyeth, has been known to me for a long time, yet there were so many surprises at “Jamie Wyeth a Major Retrospective Featuring Six Decades of his Work” at the Brandywine River Museum of Art, January 17 through April 5, 2015.

His friendship with Andy Warhol, spanning many years, was one surprise. Although their styles differed greatly, Wyeth considered the elder Warhol a mentor. He also had a fascination for and friendship with Nureyev, the Russian ballet dancer. There is a painting in purple with an egg-yellow background, like that used by his grandfather in an illustration for Treasure Island.

One of Nureyev in full frontal nudity was simply arresting.

Wyeth said he was struck by Nureyev's "physicality, that peasant force." He makes us feel what it must have been like to be his friend.

There was "Warhol" by Wyeth, and "Wyeth" by Warhol.

Some other surprises: he spent over two years "just crazed" by purple martins and in their many portraits, he treated them as individuals. The bird pictures included depictions of the seven deadly sins, greed, sloth, envy, pride, gluttony, anger and lust as portrayed by seagulls.

Envy, 2005-08

He often used cardboard as a substrate which surprised me, as I would hardly consider a Wyeth to be lacking in resources. He just liked cardboard! He also liked it as a subject—an example is "10 w 30" painted in 1981. It depicts chickens in a box, with the box itself as a major subject.

10w30, 1981

One depicting his mentors moved me: Winslow Homer, Andy Warhol, NC Wyeth, Andrew Wyeth, together at the sea shore in a dream-like setting: The Sea Watchers, 2009.

Some other favorites were Murder of Crows, 2003, Inferno, Monhegan 2006, and The Islander, 1975, a portrait of a ram, looking like the island patriarch.

The Islander, 1975

Reading Film Fest

The Louis Long Gallery at GAPS is seeking submissions for the Art of Film, an exhibition in collaboration with the Reading Film Fest at the Goggleworks. $35 for two entries, work must be for sale. 35% commission charged. Drop off is October 1st at GAPS, 10am-6pm.

Teaching Artists Needed

Clay on Main is looking for presenters for diverse one day workshops, a sort of grown up "make and take." It is a three hour workshop usually on Saturday from 10am-1pm, with limited enrollment (to allow for easier teaching). They offer $100 to the instructor (any material fee is additional and paid directly to you). Clay on Main will help with publicity and facilitating workshops. If you want to try teaching something new or have a special project you'd like to share, this is your chance!
